Recent stains:

Clean the stains as quickly as possible, before they dry, with a suitable product. Before applying a cleaning product, test the resistance of the colors in an inconspicuous part of the rug.

For fresh liquid stains (coffee, tea, milk, chocolate, wine, blood, urine ...):

Do not allow the stains to dry. If any liquid is spilled, wipe it immediately with absorbent paper. It is recommended to clean the stains from the outside to the inside to prevent them from spreading.

For fresh liquid stains in rugs made of wool: You can use a small amount of neutral detergent diluted in water, applied with a white cotton cloth, never pouring the liquid directly on to the rug. Before applying a cleaning product, test the resistance of the colors in an inconspicuous part of the carpet and apply the product gently.

For recent solid stains (in wool): First, remove the solid elements as much as possible with a spoon. Next, immediately put a damp cotton cloth (wrung out with cold water) and place it on the stain, leaving it on the surface to absorb the dirt. When the cloth becomes dirty, remove it and replace it with another. Repeat the operation until the stain does not transfer to the cloth anymore. Finally, leave a dry cloth on the stain.

For grease stains: We recommend use of a solvent for dry cleaning textile stains. Always apply the product using a cotton cloth to rub the stain. Never pour the product directly on the rug.

Professional cleaning:

For any doubts or clarifications that might be required, we recommend you to contact a company specialized in the cleaning and maintenance of rugs and carpets.

After the professional washing process it is possible to vary the tonality and texture of the rug.

ATTENTION!

 Vacuum the rug once a week in the same direction as the pile and without brushing it. Avoid robot vacuum cleaners that use a brush.

 It is advisable to rotate the position of the rug to avoid and wearing out the the same area and also to equalize the shade produced by sunlight.

 The dyes used in the production of our rugs is artesanal and is done at the moment the order is placed. We dye only the material necessary for the production, to avoid generating additional waste or residues. For this reason size and tonal variations can be present in the sample, up to a tolerance of 7%.

Rugs made with vegetal fibers may have greater variation in the dyeing due to the nature of the product. In addition you should know that dyed colors may fade to the original natural color of the raw material with the passage of time. For custom colors we recommended use approximate colors.

 We recommend that hand tufted rugs made made in viscose or silk should not be cleaned, only vacuumed. These rugs have a backing underneath where latex is applied to attach the pile. It is not possible to dry clean these products because they can damage the rug.

 The rugs made of PET are apt for exterior spaces and are resistant to water. In case the rug becomes soaked, leave it to dry. If it is situated on top of a wood floor or deck, or on a delicate surface, move it elsewhere so that it can totally dry.

 Prolonged exposure to sunlight, wear and tear and the passage of time are factors that can provoke alterations in color, and are the cause of discoloration, especially in carpets made of natural fibers.

 Rugs with round shapes can suffer ripples and the ends can rise. Non-slip is recommended depending the size, technique and surface.
